

Contents

Preface	vii
Carol E. Malloy, Series Editor University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
Introduction	1
Carol E. Malloy, Series Editor University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
1. Moving from Deficiencies to Possibilities: Some Thoughts on Differentiation in the Mathematics Classroom	7
Mark W. Ellis, Grades 6–8 Volume Editor California State University, Fullerton
2. Teachers’ Questions and Their Impact on Students’ Engagement and Learning	13
George W. Bright, Professor Emeritus University of North Carolina at Greensboro Jeane M. Joyner Meredith College, Raleigh, North Carolina
3. “What Question Would I Be Asking Myself in My Head?” Helping All Students Reason Mathematically	23
Beth Herbel-Eisenmann Michigan State University Mary Schleppegrell University of Michigan
4. Adding Integers: From the Classroom to the Field	39
Crystal A. Hill Indiana University–Purdue University Indianapolis
5. The Human Graph Project: Giving Students Mathematical Power through Differentiated Instruction	47
David K. Pugalee University of North Carolina at Charlotte Adam Harbaugh University of North Carolina at Charlotte Lan Hue Quach University of North Carolina at Charlotte

Contents — Continued

- 6. What Does That Mean? Drawing on Latino and Latina Students’
Language and Culture to Make Mathematical Meaning 59
Sylvia Celedón-Pattichis
University of New Mexico
- 7. Supporting Middle School Students with Learning Disabilities in the Mathematics Classroom 75
Kristin K. Stang
California State University, Fullerton
- 8. Self-Differentiating in Inclusion Classrooms: Opportunities to Learn 85
Signe E. Kastberg
Indiana University–Purdue University Indianapolis
Wendy Otoupal-Hylton
Brownsburg (Indiana) East Middle School
Sherri Farmer
Indiana University–Purdue University Indianapolis
- 9. My Students Aren’t Motivated—What Can I Do? 95
Matt Jones
California State University, Dominguez Hills
- 10. Approaches to Assessing Students’ Thinking from Analyzing Errors in Homework 105
Shuhua An
California State University, Long Beach
Zhonghe Wu
National University, California