

2005-2006 Honor Roll of Contributors

Celebrating the financial investment made by alumni and friends

School of Education • The University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill • Fall 2006

Dear Alumni and Friends,

This Honor Roll of Contributors is a celebration of those who care about the important work our School of Education is doing in the cause of public education and who have invested in that work. We have much to celebrate as the list of names will attest. This report also reminds us of the many challenges and opportunities ahead.

As you review the report, please recognize that your support allows us to bring the best of what we know about learning, teaching and research to children and schools everywhere. Perhaps the best illustration is our ability to attract some of the most promising students in the nation. Throughout this report, the voices of a few of these students are heard. Their commitment to the scholarship and practice of education is inspiring. Their dreams and their values offer renewed hope for the future of education in this country.

In the words of one alumna I recently visited, "Giving to the School of Education's annual fund is supporting the community that gave me my start. It is my commitment to developing future leaders in education. There's no better place to make a contribution!" Support from our donors is essential to transforming the lives of our students and creating future leaders in education.

Our journey is possible only with help from our alumni and friends. Thank you for your investment!

Teaching Mexican-immigrant students in western North Carolina transformed me and created in me a deep desire to work for change and social justice in the public schools. In my doctoral studies, the School of Education's Culture, Curriculum, and Change Program has allowed me to grow as a teacher and a scholar. I have been able to create a program that meets my individual needs and passions. I have also found a community of supportive professors and friends. We have helped each other learn the content and theory in our classes, but more importantly we have learned from each others' diverse backgrounds and experiences.

Throughout my life, two of my greatest passions have been the study of math and interaction with people. The opportunity to tutor middle school students during my high school years created an initial desire to teach children of this age and watch them develop during this challenging stage of life. As a middle grades education major, I have found that the professors in my program are exceptional. They go out of their way to develop personal relationships with all the students, creating a familial bond within the program. My experience at Carolina has not only exceeded my expectations, but also has cultivated a loyalty to this great University.

In my work with AmeriCorps VISTA at an after-school center in Austin, Texas, I began to recognize and think critically about the inequitable schooling that Latino and African American students receive compared to their more affluent counterparts. When I decided to pursue graduate study, I became interested in UNC because my mentor, Dr. Luis Urrieta (Ph.D. '03), had attended here, and because the flexibility and interdisciplinary coursework of the Culture, Curriculum and Change Program were extremely appealing. As a graduate student I have found that learning from my mentor has been wonderfully educational and inspiring, and fellow members of my cohort have become my best friends.

 ^ Deceased

I earned my bachelor's degree in mechanical engineering from Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in New York, but after a summer of teaching underprivileged students in Washington, D.C., I realized that teaching is my passion. While applying for a master's program at the School of Education, I received an exceptional level of helpful advice in response to my many questions. Once here, I found that the professors in the School are inspiring, fun and great mentors. I met my best friends in this program and learned how to pursue my true passion. My year in the MAT Program was the best year of my life.
