Dear Alumni and Friends,

The Honor Roll of Contributors is presented this year with deep gratitude to all who made a gift or volunteered their time to support our School of Education. Our unrestricted annual fund hit unprecedented levels of giving, thanks to the hundreds of alumni and friends who provided a financial contribution to our School. Because of your generosity, we are able to provide our students with more opportunities to enrich their educational experiences.

We celebrate a year when we have advanced our priorities. The quality of our educational programs remains high. We are proud that our School continues to be ranked within the top 10 percent of schools of education in the nation, as reported in U.S. News & World Report. Here are a few specific highlights of this year:

- Consonant with our commitment to increase student enrollment, our School, in collaboration with the College of Arts and Sciences, launched UNC-BEST this fall, an innovative program that allows undergraduate students to graduate from Carolina in four years with a biology or physics major and eligibility for licensure as a high school teacher;
- Our faculty have helped deepen the curriculum offered in our schools and are conducting research on critical issues such as promoting effective leadership, reducing student dropout and closing the achievement gap;
- Our centers are working with classroom teachers to address their most pressing needs by providing robust curriculum, nurturing novice teachers and providing pertinent professional development in areas such as mathematics and the sciences;
- Our National Research Center for Rural Education Support is reaching out to schools in rural areas, examining issues that face children as they begin their education, challenges that face students as they transition to early adolescence, issues that affect rural high school students as they prepare for adulthood and the role that distance education can play in rural schools.

All this work focuses our energies on serving the children of this state and helping to create school environments that provide opportunities for every child to learn and thrive.

Private philanthropy helps us build a strong financial base, which is essential to allow us to continue to be an important resource for our state and guide public school education policy and practice nationally. We hope you will stay in close touch and monitor our progress through The Carolina Slate, our newly created Carolina Slate Online and our School's Web site at <http://soe.unc.edu>. On behalf of our Carolina community, particularly our faculty and students, thank you!

As the oldest of four children, I am helping to pay for my own education. I am especially grateful for the Willie Hall Kennedy scholarship, which I received last year. Not only did the scholarship reduce the amount of college loans I needed, but it also freed up some of my money to be used for books, transportation to the schools where I was assigned and other volunteer activities in the community. In addition, meeting the Kennedy brothers and hearing their life stories was definitely a privilege and an extremely inspiring experience that I will always remember.

Whitney Maxwell (A.B.Ed. '09)
Elementary Education major
2007-2008 Kennedy Scholar

The Willie Hall Kennedy Scholarship was established by brothers Harold, Harvey and Michael Kennedy in memory of their grandmother, a lifelong teacher. This merit-based award is presented annually to a rising junior who has been admitted to a teacher education program in the School of Education.

Tommy and Ellen Benton, parents of former Teaching Fellow Katy Benton (A.B.Ed. '08), who is now a first-grade teacher at Contentnea Elementary School in Kinston, N.C.

My wife and I felt honored when our daughter Katy was selected as a Teaching Fellow. We were very impressed with the Teaching Fellows program when she was an undergraduate at Carolina. Besides covering the full cost of her college tuition, the program provided many motivating and enriching experiences for her. We believe that the Teaching Fellows program helps put qualified teachers in North Carolina's classrooms and we wanted to show our appreciation by giving something back. My employer, a division of the Monsanto Corporation, encourages its employees to support worthy causes. When an employee makes a philanthropic gift that's in line with the corporation's focus areas, Monsanto matches that contribution.

Tommy Benton

A Division of the Monsanto Corporation
Kinston, N.C.

Many corporations have matching gift programs, which extend the reach of employees' gifts to charitable and nonprofit organizations to support their communities. The N.C. Teaching Fellows program provides four-year, full-tuition scholarships as well as leadership and enrichment opportunities to selected outstanding undergraduates who intend to become teachers.

When I was a beginning teacher, a staff member at my school was assigned to be my mentor. She was helpful, but she was much older than I and she taught at a different grade level. I found myself seeking support from other younger teachers who taught on my grade level and had teaching styles similar to my own. When I learned about the Carolina Teachers' Connection, I thought it would be a great opportunity for me to support other young teachers who might not have someone at their school to turn to. In the process, I made a new friend! The relationship has provided an outlet for both of us to de-stress with someone outside of our own school.

Catie Gardner (A.B.Ed. '04)

Second-grade teacher
Brooks Museums Magnet Elementary School
Raleigh, N.C.

The Carolina Teachers' Connection (CTC) links alumni of the School of Education by matching experienced teachers with novice teachers to establish relationships and provide support and encouragement in the early years of teaching. In addition, the CTC maintains a group page on Facebook.com as a forum where UNC alumni teachers can connect with one another.

It has been our overall philosophy throughout life to donate when we can by volunteering our time and by making financial gifts. Neither of us majored in education, but both of us have taught in our professions in the business world. We understand the value and significance of excellent teaching. We wanted to give financially to the School of Education in order to help students in need because people helped us in school when we needed it. And we see Hulene's work with the School of Education Foundation as a way of contributing to the career advancement of the faculty and students. Being connected with the School of Education is a way for us to contribute to a base that is vitally important to the whole of society.

I am a graduate of the School of Education and I come from a family with deep roots in public education in North Carolina. I believe that preparing high quality teachers and supporting them with excellent professional development are the most powerful ways to help schools move forward and address challenges. The role of universities is central to this work. The School of Education provides the initial foundation for future teachers. Then, building on its connection with the students, the School continues to support them when they are leading their own classrooms and schools. As a passionate volunteer, I want to do all I can to help the School of Education. We need to do the best job now because schools and education are all about creating a future and providing for the next generation.

Dr. Musette Morgan (A.B.Ed.'76)
Vice President, School of Education Foundation Board, Inc.
Former member, Tennessee State Board of Education
Memphis, Tenn.

Members of the School of Education Foundation Board, Inc. serve in an advisory role to the dean regarding strategic planning of the School's investments and assist in strengthening the School's financial base.

* UNC-Chapel Hill alumni other than School of Education
^\nDeceased

It was my doctoral work at the School of Education that facilitated my role as dean at Boston University. I received a solid academic foundation and was well mentored by my professors and advisors. Now I'm at a point in my life when I can show my gratitude by giving back. Because the current cost of a graduate education is extremely high, many students need to work while in school rather than being able to give their all to their studies. Many of them graduate with a large amount of indebtedness, and others are denied the opportunity to pursue graduate studies because they can't afford to take time away from their jobs. If we are going to create a diverse educational environment that really reflects modern-day life, we must have more money for graduate scholarships. I encourage everyone to join me in giving all we can.

Wilma Peebles-Wilkins (Ph.D. '84)
Dean Emerita, School of Social Work
Boston University
Now a resident of Raleigh, N.C.

The Alumni Fellowship Fund provides much-needed support to our graduate students, allowing them to immerse themselves in their studies and pursue work that holds the promise of transforming educational thinking and practice.
